

Final Exam: HI 254-601
Fall 2024

The exam is due on Tuesday, Dec. 10 at 11:55 pm. No late papers will be accepted.

Please submit Part A and Part B separately on Moodle.

This is an open book exam. This puts an extra burden on you. It is absolutely crucial that you write in your own words. Do not lift anything from the web or from anywhere else without citing it properly. This is very important. I do not want to sound threatening – but I really want to avoid a most unpleasant situation later, so I am going to forewarn you: if you use someone else's words without citing the source it is plagiarism, and I will file an Academic Misconduct report. Please see the NCSU statement on Academic Integrity.

You may form a group to study, but everyone must write the exam on their own.

Moodle will put the papers through the TurnItIn software. You should be familiar with this by now: if you submit early you will have the opportunity to withdraw your paper and resubmit if it finds similarities with other sources (on the web or in its library of digitized works) or grammatical errors.

PART B: The Cartoon Analysis (50 points).

Analyze these five cartoons. All of them have been featured in my lectures. Your analysis should (1) pay attention to the details of the cartoon and (2) explain its historical context and (3) interpret its message.

Please submit this as a separate file (not with your essay) on Moodle. It, too, will be put through the TurnItIn software, so it is to your advantage to submit early.

Name your document "Your last name, Your first name – Exam Cartoons"

To clarify what I expect, here is an example of an analysis that would receive an "A."

This is an example of an answer: This cartoon packs a lot of information and a biting commentary into a small space. Titled “Blind Leading the Blind,” it caricatures the presidents who led the United States into the war in Vietnam. At the beginning (left) is Eisenhower. This misrepresents the origins of US involvement in Vietnam since it was Truman who began supporting the French. To be historically accurate, the cartoon should begin with Truman pushing Eisenhower, sporting sunglasses (he does not see the situation clearly) and holding a golf club. (Ike played a lot of golf.) He is leaning toward his successor, Kennedy, and lightly pushing him forward. This refers to the fact that Eisenhower’s policy of supporting Diem and scuttling the elections in South Vietnam deepened US involvement there. Kennedy, also sporting shades, carries a cane (he had a bad back and often used a cane), and his feet are getting wet. He leans more heavily on Johnson than Eisenhower had leaned on him. This signifies Kennedy’s escalation of US involvement in Vietnam, sending approximately 17,000 military advisers there, while using Agent Orange, napalm, and counterinsurgency tactics. Johnson, still not seeing the situation clearly (wearing sunglasses), is ankle deep in the water and shoves Nixon forward, which refers to his dramatic deepening of the war in Vietnam by sending a half million US soldiers there. Nixon, although seeing the situation clearly, plunges into the quagmire.

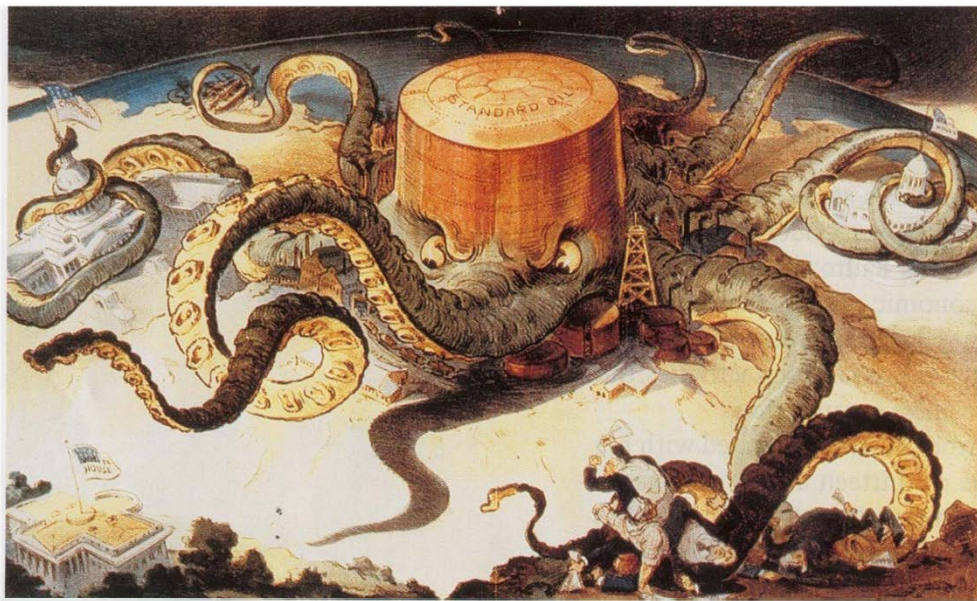

The Five Cartoons

1.

(The original cartoon did not have “Rwanda” in red, but it was later edited to include it. Please comment on this version --with Rwanda -- of the cartoon.)

2.

“Next!”

3.

“New Member of the Orchestra”

4.

5.

Ho Hum! No chance of contagion.

By Dr. Seuss