First, I would communicate with my team and explain the situation, asking if someone could do my portion of the work and offering to return the favor by doing their portion of the work the following week. If someone takes the offer, wonderful. If not, I would simply find time outside of the wedding to work on the project.

i) I do not think anonymous voting will help. Voting will assign a winner, but people should speak up and offer their points of view and take counterpoints. What if someone has a very crucial counterpoint that would sway the vote of others, they simply did not think about it? Open communication would be best.

ii)

I believe that while anonymous voting is not the proper way to decide, a ranked choice public voting or simply public voting would work best. If voting as an option is not available, I would propose assigning a team leader and then they make the decision for the group, preferably weighing the pros and cons of each potential solution.
